Theme

CI theme: (Write about the semester theme 'Group Polarization' in your language.) (50-150 words)	Group polarization is a psychological phenomenon where individuals' initial attitudes or beliefs become more extreme when discussed within a group of like-minded individuals. This shift towards more extreme viewpoints is driven by a combination of informational influence, where people encounter new arguments supporting their stance, and normative influence, as individuals aim to conform and gain approval from their peers. As group members reinforce each other's opinions, the group's overall position becomes more extreme than the individuals' original views. This polarization can lead to strengthened group cohesion but also exacerbate divisions between different groups, contributing to societal polarization. It's crucial to recognize this effect in contexts like social media and political discussions, where echo chambers and group dynamics can amplify extreme ideologies.	01
Group/Individual theme: (What was your theme? Why did you take this theme?) (150-250 words)	Amidst the era of rapid-paced fashion trends, there exists a curious paradox where people seemingly possess sightless eyes. The accumulation of clothing has reached such staggering proportions that garments are acquired with abandon, often purchased solely for a fleeting photograph or a single event. Eventually, these items find themselves relegated to a mound of fabric. Over time, this mound metamorphoses into an inert assemblage – a testament to excess. The garment we proudly unveil before you is a manifestation of this narrative, a creation forged from the refuse abandoned on the streets of Mirpur. It's important to acknowledge that what we see is but a mere fraction of the discarded materials. This representation prompts contemplation on the staggering volume of waste engendered by the frenetic wheels of fast fashion. The theme we present serves as a potent query to our audience: Could it be that the environmental repercussions of fast fashion far exceed our imaginings? Ponder the sheer magnitude of waste generated, as our voracious appetite for fleeting trends churns out endless cycles of garments. The backdrop of our creation beseeches each onlooker to acknowledge their role in this unfolding ecological narrative. Is it time to recognize that the allure of fast fashion obscures a reality of mounting environmental harm, imploring us to rethink our choices and tread more lightly upon the world?	02
Artwork
Layout & Plan: (Attach the image of your layout) (Why and what kind of fashion did you want to do?) (150-250 words)	Apparel constitutes a fundamental element within the realm of five essential human entitlements. However, a concerning trend emerges when we consider our engagement with clothing. This tendency often leads to excessive consumption – acquiring beyond our genuine requirements. Consequently, these excess items are left unused, exerting detrimental environmental impacts. Essentially, our excessive consumer behavior contributes to ecological harm. Our primary aim is to counteract this inclination by repurposing surplus fabrics we possess. Our core mission revolves around crafting garments utilizing these extra materials. The endeavor involves the creation of two distinct models, representing a son and a daughter respectively. To accomplish this, each member of our team undertakes the task of collecting their neglected attire. Subsequently, through a meticulous process of sewing and merging, these pieces are ingeniously combined to	02 fashion a wholly innovative design. In this transformative journey, even seemingly ordinary components like soft water lids gain renewed significance. These items transcend their original functionality to serve as both decorations and symbols of our commitment to sustainable practices. Their incorporation epitomizes our dedication to blending innovation with environmental responsibility. Amidst a world where rampant materialism frequently undermines environmental equilibrium, our project serves as a thought-provoking reflection on prudent consumption and creative renewal. It underscores the potential to breathe fresh life into disregarded possessions, transforming them into fashion that signifies not just style, but also a heightened awareness of our collective environmental impact. Through championing this approach, we aspire to inspire others to reassess their relationship with belongings and strive for a balanced coexistence between ownership and environmental preservation.

Production: (Please write about the production process of your work from the beginning including materials you used, the place you worked at, any obstacles you faced, any improvisation you did, the result came out at the end.) (Please attach some images of your production process.) (300-400 words)	Initially, we encountered some challenges with our initial plan. The starting point seemed elusive, and the task itself proved to be more intricate than we had initially anticipated. In the midst of this, a setback arose when one of our group members withdrew from the course, intensifying our predicament. Despite the multitude of ideas offered by everyone, arriving at a decisive course of action eluded us. Ultimately, a collective consensus emerged: our focus would revolve around countering the fast fashion phenomenon. With this new direction in mind, we commenced the gathering of used garments from our respective homes. From my own residence, I managed to amass roughly two sacks of cloth. Simultaneously, each group member contributed as best as they could by gathering discarded items. However, our path wasn't without its twists; an issue arose which led us to revise our strategy. Subsequently, a decision was reached to incorporate polythene and bottle caps onto the fabric. Collaborating at Navid's residence, we also embarked on a quest to secure bottle caps from campus stores and plastic bags from various streets. Employing buttons from the collected clothes, we adjoined them to the attire. The catch was that none among us possessed sewing skills. I resorted to seeking assistance from a tailor, sewing and attaching the plastic elements. The last three days leading up to the completion of the dress and the trashion show were spent at Navid's place. Initially, apprehension loomed over us. Doubts crept in—would the dress turn out as envisioned? Could we truly walk the runway with confidence? Yet, gradually, a sense of assurance blossomed. A newfound self-assuredness was taking root. The beauty of our accomplishment was only possible through the collective contributions of every group member. Upon finishing the dressmaking and the trashion show, I returned home after four days. The process was not without its physical toll; both my hands and Trowyas suffered burns from the adhesive used for attaching the plastic. While the initial phases might have induced a sense of monotony, a profound self-satisfaction arose upon completion. The experience of collaborating within a group left a lasting impression, enriching my understanding of teamwork and collaboration.	04

Exhibition

Exhibition: (Where was the show, how was that platform, who were the spectators, was any other platform better for the show, and why?) (150 -250 words) (Please attach some images/screenshots of your final work and show)	The event took place within ULAB's Research Building auditorium, which had been adorned in an exceptionally captivating manner. Gratitude is extended to the organizers for their efforts in creating such an aesthetically pleasing ambiance. The stage itself was also quite visually appealing, although there remains room for improvement. Given that multiple groups utilized the same ramp for their presentations, it would have been prudent to design a wider runway. Reflecting on the experience, I believe it might be beneficial to host this event in a more capacious venue moving forward. The evolution of the event's attendance has been noteworthy. While initially attended mainly by MSJ students, the audience now encompasses students from diverse departments, alongside a notable presence of guardians. This growing popularity underlines the event's significance. Therefore, my suggestion is to consider relocating the event to a larger venue to accommodate the expanding interest and audience size more effectively. 	02
Feedback (Please interview 5 people and ask the same 5 questions to each person to fill up the table below.) (Please edit question number 5 with your message in it, before you send the questions to your interviewee.)		04

Question	Answer
Interviewee:1
1. Please tell me your name and profession (in detail).	Name: Tasfin Jahan Yousha	Profession (in detail): Studying in BBA department of ULAB University. Fourth semester. ID: 22201110
2. Please tell me what message you get after seeing my artwork, or is it very confusing and very hard to understand?	I didn't think the message was too difficult to understand after watching the show. Each group had some message which they conveyed through their dress. I think it was tried to show that something can be made so beautifully out of garbage.
3. If you get any message, which clues have helped you to understand the message?	Of course there were many messages from the show. Especially the materials of everyone's dress give the message that it is possible to make many things sustainable.
4. Does this artwork look common or does it look extraordinary to you? If it looks unique or creative to you, what kind of uniqueness do you find in this work?	I found Trasionshow to be amazing. I only saw on Facebook that there are shows like this in foreign countries. I never thought that this could happen in Bangladesh. Only one seems extraordinary to me.
5. I wanted to tell you (write your message here). Have you found this message in this artwork? If my message could be more visible in it, please suggest it to me.	Yes, I understood the message of your dress. It became more clear when your model banner was shown. Also a lot of things have been understood by looking at the materials of the dress.

I do not know if such work has been done anywhere before. And through this show everyone has been able to highlight their creativity. There should be more such creative work.
5. I wanted to tell you (write your message here). Have you found this message in this artwork? If my message could be more visible in it, please suggest it to me.	At first I did not understand what the message was after seeing your dress. After seeing the banner in the model's hand, I understood. Your dress was also very beautiful. And fast fashion is really taking shape. All in all I like it.
Realization
(Have you got all the feedback from the audience as you expected? Did the viewers get your message? Please explain the reasons why or why they did not get your message. What have you realized about your succession at the end? How should you do the fashion if you want to do it again? What were the strengths of your work? Why? What were your faults? How can you avoid your faults next time? What is your thought about this project?) (400-500 words)	Participating in the Trashion event held at ULAB's Research Building was a truly enlightening experience that left an indelible mark on my perception of fashion, sustainability, and creative expression. The event not only showcased innovative designs but also served as a powerful catalyst for introspection and change. As I walked into the Research Building's auditorium, the atmosphere was alive with a unique blend of anticipation and excitement. The surroundings were adorned with meticulously crafted pieces that defied conventional expectations of fashion. What struck me profoundly was the realization that fashion need not be divorced from sustainability. The fusion of discarded materials, artistry, and purpose showcased the incredible potential for reimagining the way we interact with clothing. The journey of each ensemble on the runway echoed a narrative of transformation – from waste to wonder. Witnessing the dedication that participants poured into their creations, I couldn't help but reflect on the profound impact of individual actions. Each piece spoke volumes about conscious consumption, repurposing, and the potential for change that lies within our grasp. Beyond the tangible garments, the event reverberated with a sense of unity. It was a convergence of like-minded individuals who recognized the urgency of addressing the environmental impact of fashion. Conversations flowed freely, ideas exchanged, and a palpable sense of community emerged. This shared commitment to sustainability illuminated the power of collective action and the potential for meaningful change when we come together around a common cause. Moreover, the event underscored the role of creativity in driving change. The innovative use of materials that would otherwise be discarded highlighted the limitless potential of human ingenuity. It demonstrated that challenges can be reframed as opportunities, inviting us to rethink established norms and push the boundaries of our imagination.

	In the aftermath of the event, I find myself more attuned to the choices I make as a consumer.
